
A Book List

by Tim Morris

These are some books I have enjoyed recently, admittedly some go back about a year.

Aftermath - Joel Meyerowitz, pub Phaidon

Meyerowitz had to force his way into the ground zero area to be able to record the site and its people. This became a personal project lasting a year.

After The Flood - Robert Polidori, pub Steidl

The results of Hurricane Katrina in and around New Orleans, large format photography, no people as they had all left.

Andre Kertesz - Noel Borcier, pub Phaidon

I bought this whilst visiting La Maison de Europeenne de la Photographie in Paris. Sadly I picked up the French version by mistake.

Harry Callaghan: The Photographer At Work - Brit Salvessen, pub The Centre For Creative Photography & Yale Press

The Hebrideans - Gus Wylie, pub Birlinn

As I already have two other Hebridean books by Gus Wylie I ordered this for myself at Christmas.

The printing quality rather detracts from the work, still very good work however.

American Music - Annie Leibowitz, pub Random House

If you are a fan of American popular music (folk, blues, soul, jazz etc) this is a must. I was a little wary of the Leibowitz factor, but the images work very well and seem sincere.

The Ongoing Moment - Geoff Dyer, pub Abacus

A fascinating essay on photography.

Drive-By-Shootings - David Bradford, pub Konemann

Photographs taken by a New York taxi driver, full of energy, movement and atmosphere.

This book is probably hard to find as I think it had been remaindered when I got it.
